

project in 62 buildings. This year, more building owners are expected to receive financial support from Seoul City, as the city has now varied the amount of funding, depending on the level and scope of each project.

consumption, the building uses natural ventilation and lighting. In December, Seoul City plans to complete the trial project of the Energy Zero House and use the results of the trial as a blueprint for new buildings with a self-sustainable supply of energy in the future.